

CITY COMMUTERS HAVE STOCKED UP ON 50-RIDE TICKETS

Feel They Are Penalized for Willingness to Pay for Comfort.

The fifty-ride family ticket of the New York Central Lines, beginning with those purchased to-day, must bear the photograph of the purchaser furnished by the buyer. In addition it must bear the signature of every member of the family that is entitled to use it. The conductor has the right to demand of any one riding on the ticket that he or she sign a slip so that signatures may be compared.

Some months ago the road put in its system of "mugging" commuters, saying tickets were being misused. The same contention evidently is now made in regard to the higher priced fifty-ride family tickets.

Station agents are of the opinion that after the buyer gets his photograph ready for pasting on the new ticket it will take between five and ten minutes to do the clerical work at the ticket window. In the meanwhile the window line will be held up.

The result has been that as fifty-ride tickets are good for twelve months, persons who wish to save annoyance stocked up yesterday on the kind that do not carry the trisome restrictions the new ones do.

Persons who use the road from stations that are paralleled by subway and elevated in the city limits in many cases plan to travel by the cheaper route rather than stand the annoyance. Most of them who use the line now do so in order to read a paper in comfort or enjoy a smoke.

They land at the Grand Central and take a subway or elevated line or surface line for the rest of their journey. The contribution to the railroad they figure is a tax upon their wish to be comfortable, as the time from Fordham and other points to 42d Street is about the same by subway and elevated.

The sale of fifty-ride tickets per station is said to average above $700 a month at the stations, to say nothing of the sale at the Grand Central windows. Persons who use the lines feel they are being penalized for paying from $60 to $80 a year for riding inside the city to avoid a little discomfort.

This class of contributors to the New York Central feel that what it picks up on its trains at those stations inside the city is largely velvet, as the trains have to run to Mount Vernon and beyond. They think the least the road could do, in view of the advance that has been made in the past few years on fares, would be to let them alone.

Their contention is that, while family tickets may be used by others at stations beyond the city limits where the road affords the only way of getting to the city, inside the city limits a man who pays two to three times the amount he need pay for transportation and guarantees to do this fifty times is an asset to a road that should not be discouraged.

They point out that every train that leaves the Grand Central Station in the rush hours is half filled by persons who ride to destinations that can be reached on the elevated express and subway trains for 5 cents. And they also point out that the New York, New Haven and Hartford trains, which are not allowed to carry this traffic, leave with seats vacant.
